TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1877.

The Defeat of Logan,

The Shelby Leader gives the following graphic account of the scene in the Illinois Lagislature when Logan was defeated:

The first sensation that aroused general applause and afforded relief to the weary was when Senator Kehoe's name was called and he voted in a loud, ringing tone for "Davis." He had in all the previous ballots voted for Senator Haines. This change fairly paralyzed the republicans, who were mostly voting for Haines, with a view of securing Kehoe's and two other democratic votes.

When Representative Easton's name was called he arose in a slow, dignified way, looking plarmed, and in a tremulous tone voted for "Judge Davis." He had voted for Lathrop, Washburne, Haines, Logan and Lawrence previously, and was considered as a doubtful republican. This change awakened the most exciting demonstrations of exultation on the part of the independents and democrats. The leading republicans, pale and dejected, surrounded Easton and besought him not to desert them, as with his vote they expected to hold the

Davis men at bay. When Representative Hickey, democrat, who had been the twin colleague with Senator Kehoe in voting for Haines, lisped "Davis." the clerk and reporters thought it must have been a mistake, and called the name twice, until Mr. Hickey distinctly put himself on record for Davis. It was now evident that if all the democrats and independents kept united on Davis he would be elected. This idea was soon caught by the spectators and the Davis admirers made considerable confusion by their loud talking over the chances, and by an occasional outbreak of applause in the galleries. Speaker Shaw ordered the roll call suspended for several minutes to enable him to restore order. The crowd kept very orderly until the end of the roll call, but when it was evident that Judge Davis had the necessary number of votes to elect him the assemblage gave a grand yell of surprise and joy which continued for five minutes. As soon as the noise was partially rapped down by the speaker the republicans who had voted for Haines hopped en masse to the floor and all shouted to the Speaker to have their votes changed from Haines to Lawrence. The confusion was astounding, and the clerks refused to make any changes in the vote unless the names were given singly and in order. In ten minutes these changes were made. Mr. Easton then arose, and in a subdued manner, as though he was under the party lash, he changed from Davis to Lawrence amid applause and hisses. No sooner had Easton's change been made, than Representative Boyd, a democrat, who had voted for Lawrence, changed to Davis un der similar greetings as Easton received. Senator Robison of Tazeweil asked to have his vote changed from Davis to Lawrence. Senator Robinson of Chicago arose in an excited manner and demanded the clerk not to count the vote less for Davis, as Mr. Robinson had not voted for Davis but for Haines.

After an exchange of passionate personalities on each other's credititity, in which the house became excited and angry, the result of the ballot was handed to the speaker to announce. It was appounced as follows: - Davis, 101; Law rence, 94; Haines, 3; scattering, 2.

The winning party or combination suppressed their demonstrations until after the vote was published, and Judge Davis declared by Speaker Shaw as the Senator cleet. During the Speaker's formal duties of making the official declaration, the stillness of the assemblage was painfully in contrast with the excitement a few minutes before. As soon as Scuator Davis was declared elected the scene that followed beggars all description. The Davis men and sympathizers jumped to their feet, yelled, shouten, sung, stamped, and cried for joy. Several of the men embraced each other in a lovingly manner. Don Morrison, who was the leader against Logan, lest control of himself and shed tears of joy. Mrs. Charlotte Smith, an anti-Logan lady, lead the applause in the ladies' galleries. A dezen men jumped on the desks and gave vent to their feelings by a dance of the most fantustic style. Hundred of hats were tossed in the air. Ladies fluttered their handkerchiefs. The republicans kept their seats, and Mr. Thompson, one of their number, shouted out while on the top of a desk, "Brothers, let us pray in this hour of adversity. It took the victors fifteen minutes to work off their superabandance of cothusiasm over their success. As soon as quiet was restored sufficiently to hear a motion, the joint convention adjourned, on motion of Mr. Sittie, at I o'clock. Afterwards both houses assembled and passed a concurrent resolution to adjourn over to next Thursday, so as to give the members a chance to recuperate from the weariness of the Senatorial campaign. FISH 1 25 bbls choice No. 2 MACKEREL. 60 bbls No. 3 MEDIUM.
